Expectation and anticipation pervade the stadium.

The torch is lit
and our golden moment
has finally arrived.

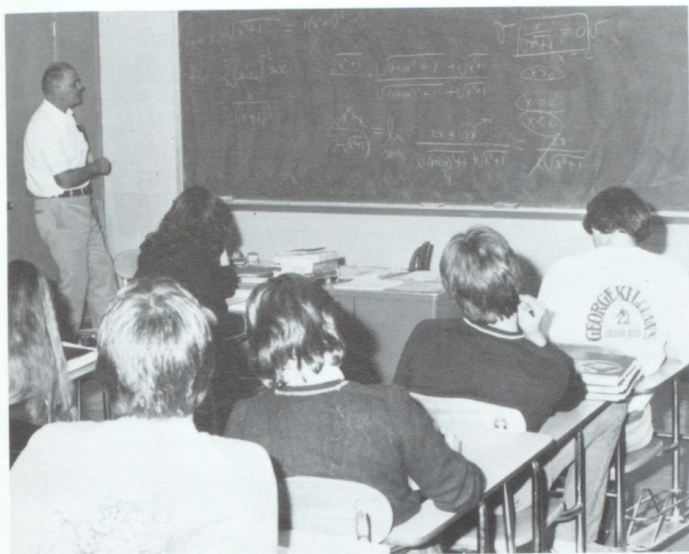

After 4 years of
eager anticipation,
we must now embark upon a journey full of confrontations and challenges.

Sustained by the knowledge and skills instilled in us by our coaches and fellow teammates, we will execute a performance that displays our unrelenting strength and spirit.

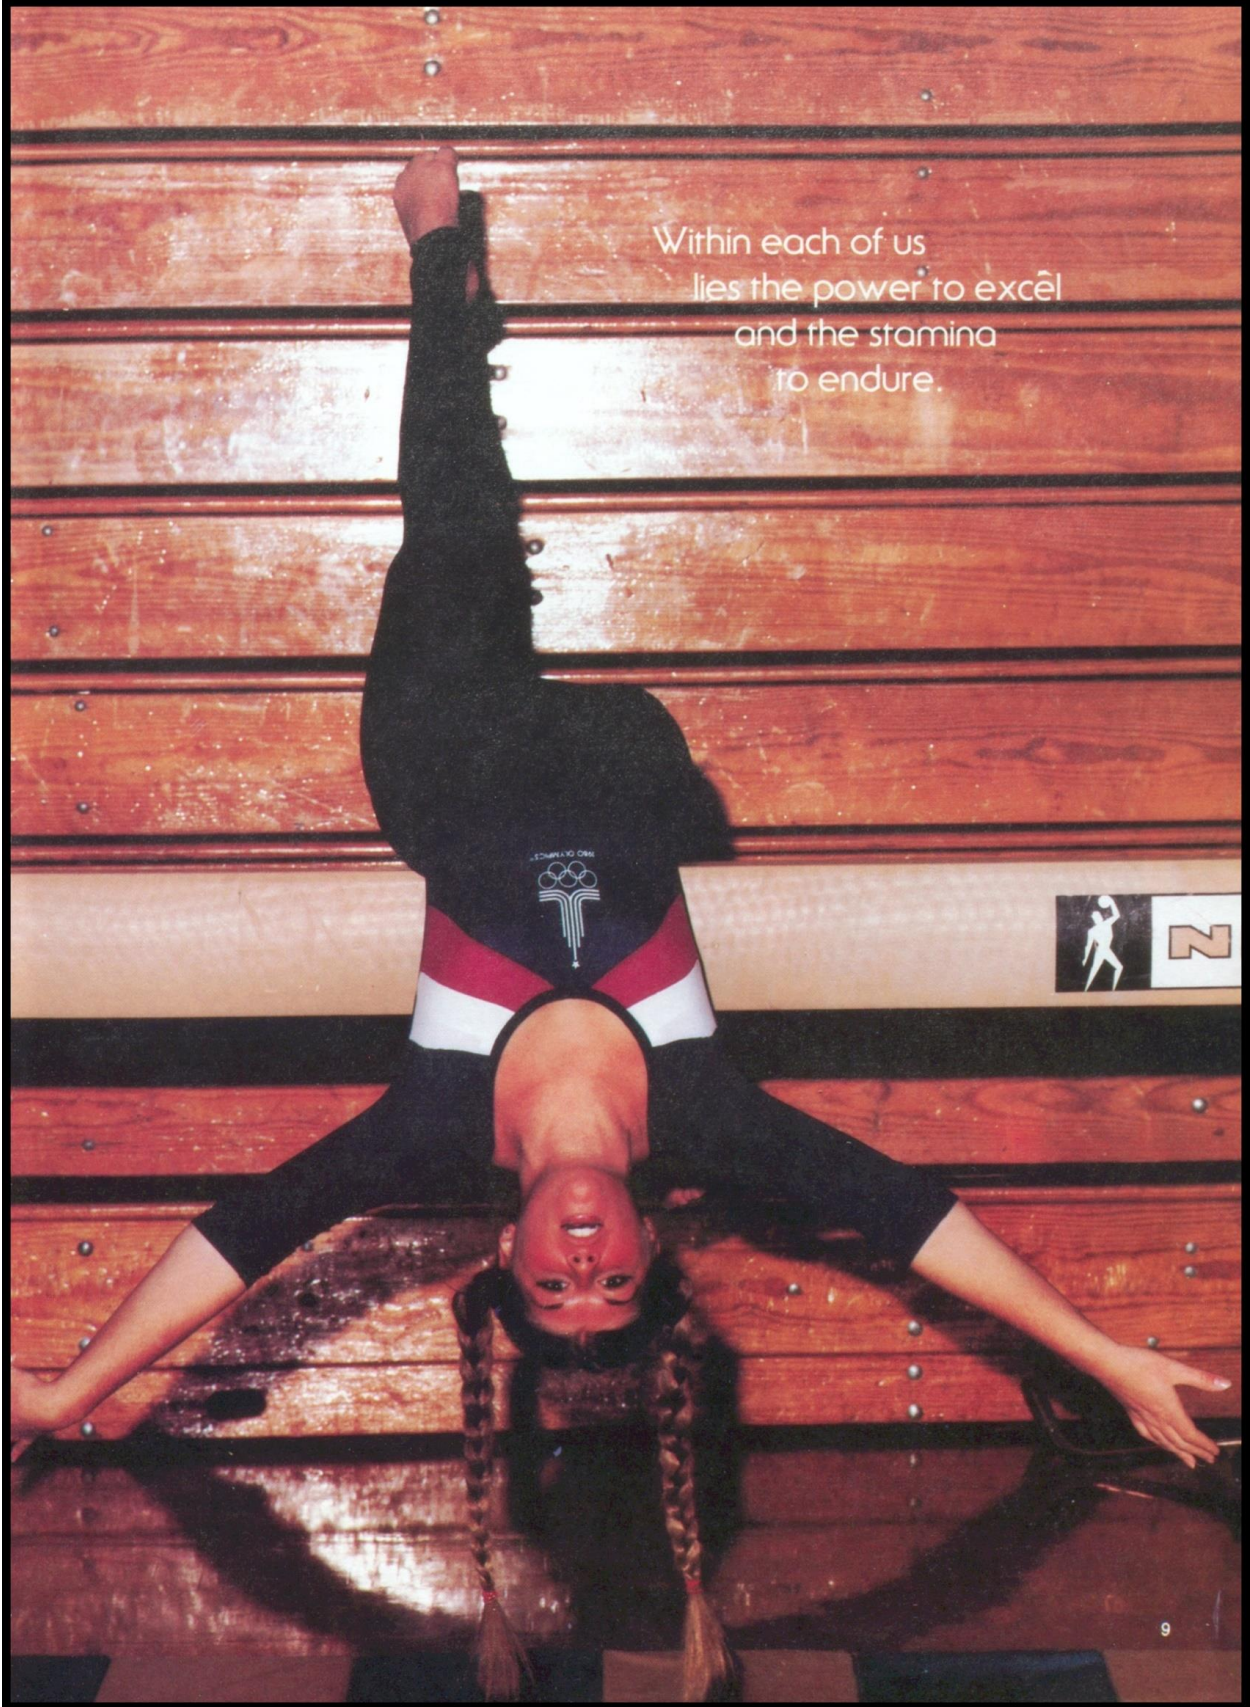

We will compete with confidence.

Though obstacles may block our path or slow our pace, we will never be defeated.

Within each of us
lies the power to excel
and the stamina to endure.

Compliments of W. Quagliaroli/Evergreen Tree Service

GOLD MEDALIST

In the past four years, through our trials and triumphs, there has been one source of strength from whom we have derived inspiration and encouragement. His willingness to help and his readiness to support are attributes that make him our friend as well as our teacher.

Because of his determination, he remains for us a symbol of victory, a conqueror of insurmountable feats.

We proudly dedicate our yearbook to a true champion of the human spirit:

Mr. Carl Purinton

EDITORIAL COMMENT

84

For the past four years we all have been engaged in a race which has taken us over steep hills and into expansive valleys of academic achievement. During this scholastic competition, our inspiration and endurance have propelled us toward one milestone in our lives — high school graduation.

Throughout the race, we have taken great care to pace ourselves and to adjust our strides in anticipation of the final lap. As we approach it, we realize that all our effort will culminate in one final moment and that we must push ourselves to run faster and to strive harder.

Although there will be only one victor, we must celebrate the efforts of every competitor. The true accomplishment lies within the efforts exercised by every runner who completes the race.

I salute the spirit of competition.

A hand-drawn scroll with a thick black outline, tilted diagonally. The scroll has a rolled-up top-left corner and a folded bottom-right corner. The text is written in a simple, hand-drawn font.

THE RACE

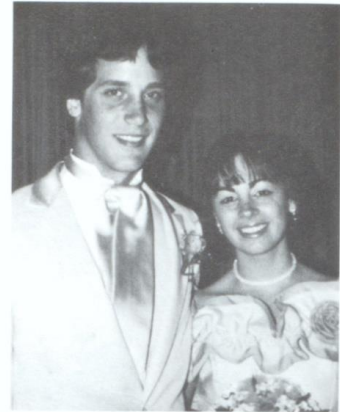

Team unity is the single element that allows our team to achieve great success off the playing field as well as on it. When the race is over and the pressures of competition abate, we turn our efforts to a different calendar of events.

OUR INTERNATIONAL COMPETITOR

84

Eeva Korhonen arrived from Helsinki, Finland in August to spend a year living "the American way." She came with the Youth for Understanding (YFU) Organization, which allows 500 Finnish students to come to America each year. Eeva made many friends in school, especially through her participation in field hockey, indoor track, tennis, and chorus. Although she misses her family and friends, she says the people here have made it easier for her to feel at home. Eeva will miss her new friends in Windsor Locks, but, when she leaves in July, she will take many happy memories with her.

Eeva, it is hard to say goodbye.
We will surely miss you.

Moi!

THE GAMES

The concentration, the tension, the excitement, and even the agony all play essential roles in every aspect of the Games. It is during the actual competition, however, that we must strive the hardest to establish a standard of excellence. Once the Games have been concluded, we can indulge ourselves and reflect upon our ultimate achievements. It is only by this reflection that we realize that our true victories were not in the winning but in the discovery of the best within each of us.

We finally acknowledge our courage as a form of solidarity which will never be weakened or destroyed. We will always salute the spirit of the 1984 Olympic athletes. They not only displayed grandeur and excellence but also set the pace for tomorrow's champions.

COACHING STAFF

The long hours, the tedious workouts and the constant tension of this Olympiad have been endured by both the competitors and their coaches. Through their constant guidance, we have learned the true meaning of dedication; a dedication which we, in turn, have channeled into our own particular fields of competition. Their faith in us has allowed us to clearly see our strengths as well as our weaknesses. Through their encouragement, we have been able to bring our aspirations within our reach and establish a solid foundation based on talent.

Our total preparation for the Games must be attributed, in large measure, to all our coaches. For the past four years they have taught us the necessary skills, helped us better our records, spurred us on even in defeat, and continually applauded our effort. We owe them many thanks and much gratitude.
